Newcastle 7

The club had its best turnout yet this year at Newcastle AC's 7 mile road race. Toby has shown he is in great form so far this year and led the club home in 40:21. Another excellent performance was Jan Hulme, who not only got 1st Lady v50, but more impressively was 3rd Lady overall! If there was ever a good advertising campaign for Jan's spinning classes, this has got to be it!

Team Managers

Just a quick update on the clubs team manger positions. Unfortunately this year Dale and Louise handed over the roles of men's and ladies team managers respectively. We would like to say thanks for all the hard work they have contributed to the teams whilst in post.

We are pleased however that we have 2 new mangers to take over these posts; Dan Clowes and Adela Salt. As I am sure everybody realizes, a lot of hard work goes into getting teams together for club events and as such I hope everyone will be able to offer support and encouragement to them both.

On behalf of the club, we would like to Congratulate Cheryl and Brian Rawlings on their recent marriage. We hope you had a fantastic day and wish you all the best for the future!

Flora London Marathon 2005

And so onto a review of this years FLM.

14 members went down to London this year, some for the countless time and others for the first time.

Alison Bradeley ran her first marathon this year at London and finished very comfortably in 4:27. Alison's training must have gone very well as any worries about 'hitting the wall' turned out to be unfounded! Another well done should go to Alison for the money she has raised for her charity.

Trentham's top male on the day was Kev Finney who only very narrowly missed out on a sub-3. Our top lady and overall top club finisher, was Adela Salt who ran a remarkable 2:53 - even the ever modest Del has said she was delighted with her time. You'll find an article kindly written by Adela in this edition, giving us her perspective on the day.

In total 8 of our contingent managed to get under 3:30 which hopefully everyone will agree is pretty impressive! A massive WELL DONE goes out to everyone ... 26.2 miles is a long, long way!

London Marathon 2005

Before anybody else asks, the first lady finished in 2.17, and yes, her name was Paula. I finished a good half an hour later, but what an experience.

I'd qualified for the England AAA Women's Championship this year, and I knew I was mixing with some of the best female runners in the world when I spotted mirrors and carpets in the portaloos, with flowers to freshen things up a bit!

Lining up on the start line, the butterflies were kicking in. The TV cameras went into action, and we waited in anticipation for the elite women to line up in front of us. A ripple of applause followed, as the likes of Sonia O'Sullivan, Benita Johnson, Margaret Okayo and Joyce Chepchumba all lined up, before a huge cheer as Paula Radcliffe walked out and stood amongst us. It was quite emotional, all of us "ladies" looking up to Paula with utmost respect at who we considered to be the best female runner in the world.

Haile Gebrselassie came out to start the race, which caused more cheering and wolf whistles before the claxon sounded. That was the last I saw of Paula, as her head bobbed off down the road ahead of us.

I didn't really know what to expect from the Championship race. There were probably about 100 or so at the start, but by 5K, the field had broken up and we were running in small groups. I was so used to running London with 30,000 other people, it felt strange seeing an empty road ahead.

Before long, I was running alone, and the spectators lining the route increased as I neared the Cutty Sark. All I could hear was roaring from the crowd, and amongst that there were shouts of "Keep going girl!", "Well done Trentham!". I couldn't believe that these complete strangers were singling me out and cheering me on.

One of the best moments for me was going across Tower Bridge. The crowds by now had grown considerably and the noise was deafening. I rounded the corner and saw the blue supports of the bridge but I couldn't see any other women in front of me. There was still cheering and clapping, still shouts of Trentham, and nobody else on the road but me. I felt like a champion, like it was me leading the race and not Paula, who by now was probably a good couple of miles ahead of me. I found myself being lifted by it all, and ran across that bridge full of emotion and pride, overwhelmed at the level of support.

It was hard in places running alone – you can see the course ahead, as well as all the small hills that are normally hidden by "the masses". I went through a rough patch at about 16 miles but by 20 I'd got back into my stride and was being pushed along by the support of the crowds.

Trentham Running Club Summer 2005 Newsletter

The “masses” started appearing on the other side of the road as I was heading for home, and I heard a couple of shouts of “Go Del from Trentham!” – one off Vernon from Stone Master Marathoners, and the other Kev from Trentham (sorry Kev didn’t see you – but thanks anyway!)

The pace I was doing would bring me in around the same time as the elite men, and I started to panic about the leading men trying to get past me and me tripping them up or getting in the way. As it happened, I was approaching Westminster when the men’s lead vehicle came past with Jimmy Saville on board, waving at me and me waving back (thank God that wasn’t on TV!) Next thing, a little man passed me on the left hand side. He really was short, and I later found out that it was Martin Lel from Kenya who won the men’s race. I didn’t trip him up or get in the way – he was going too fast for that.

The last mile is always the hardest for me. I’m absolutely exhausted but can’t stop as so many people are shouting encouragement. The support was fantastic, and as Buckingham Palace appeared ahead, I knew it was almost over. The 2nd and 3rd men went past me (Gharib and Ramaala), as I turned the corner and saw the finish. Somehow I always manage to muster some energy, and sprinted to the finish absolutely elated – I’d broken the 3 hours I had been aiming for.

Having received my medal, found my kit bag and headed for the changing area, I literally bumped into some of the women I had been chatting to at the start. We’d all achieved our goals, and all vowed to be back again next year and maybe go even faster.

I’d travelled down with a bunch of Stafford Harriers for the weekend, and when speaking to them later that night, they asked how I’d got on. Their excuse for me being quicker than all but one of the Harriers? They like to get value for money from races, and so take their time!

Adela Salt

Name: David Filmer .President (nobody else wanted the job), Club Founder (Yes, I'm the one to blame !!!!)

Age: 56

Motivation: Running to me is like the valve on a pressure cooker .It releases all my steam (and every one who knows me can confirm I've got plenty of that !)

Best running tip: At drink stations (especially in big events) Never dive in for the first drink you see .Go for one of the last ones .Not only will you escape the crush but you will save yourself valuable seconds but above all you will make the day of the kid who you take the drink off , You are probably his first customer !

Typical training

Sun 1-30 to 2 hrs very steady .With Lionels group if time allows or on own if not .

Mon 5 mile jog with Jim my dog, off road

Tues 1 hr either with John Bick in a.m. or with club if not working

Wed 5 mile with dog

Thurs 1hr with J B

Friday 5 miles with the odd burst

Sat I NEVER run

You will notice there is not much quality in my training these days however I do always try to push the last mile in every run I do . Not very scientific but it works for me !

Running vice: Beer & getting behind a nice bottom in a race !!

24 TRC runners took part in this tough little 10k this year. Toby and Adela continue to lead the club home in the Men's and Women's categories with fine performances. Our ladies also took away the team prize and hopefully there will be more to come this year.

Excellent runs also came out of 2 members who must now have realised the benefits of staying off the tipple the night before - I won't name names!

Sharon Edwards also completed the run in under 55 mins, in what must still be one of her first outings for the club. Well done!

We are always looking for new social events and activities everyone in the club can take part in away from the more competitive side of things.

If you have any suggestions or ideas that you think would work well for TRC please let us know. For example the Christmas 'do' always goes down well with members and perhaps you think a mid-year meal would be a good idea, or perhaps you think a organised trip out to the Lake District for a weekend sounds good.

ALL SUGGESTIONS GRATEFULLY RECEIVED!!!
